Terms of Use

To protect the integrity of the data in the HRI, the public may view the data, but only authorized users may edit data. Authorization of individual users will be made at the discretion of LCPC and the Lancaster County IT and Budget Services Department. Municipalities may designate a user to maintain and edit the data. There must be a defined process for altering records, and all changes must be documented. Even if a building is demolished, its record should be maintained. The database includes a "demolished" checkbox to distinguish between existing and demolished buildings. By maintaining this information, users can see how a building or site has changed over time.

Disclaimer

Original data provided in the Lancaster County Historic Resources Inventory database was determined by a professional architectural historian based on a field survey of 14 Lancaster County boroughs between 2010 and 2014. It is intended to be representative of conditions at the time of survey; however, this information is dynamic and will change over time. Users of the database are therefore fully responsible for determining the accuracy, completeness, currency and/or suitability of the information. This data is provided as a service to municipalities and the public to provide a basis for education, historic preservation and heritage tourism. While the survey is intended to be comprehensive in the municipalities surveyed, omission from this data does not preclude a building from being historic.
